The Felice Lyne Concert.

Honolulu society is much interested in the concert to be given here by the American prima donna, Felice Lyne.

Two years ago when Miss Lyne was the idol of all London, including everyone from the occupants of the royal boxes to the Italian barbers who stood at the back of the topmost gallery, she gave out a very interesting interview in regard to her impressions of Queen Mary, the children of Prince Alexander of Teck, Lady Sackville and the farewell reception that the Whitehall Reids gave to the German ambassador. It was printed about as follows:

The reporter had been waiting for Miss Lyne for quite a long time when at last she appeared. A slim, peppery Anglo-Indian and two sky-blue muslin dresses with beautiful shoulders stopped out, and then a Benares nurse in charge of a flowered faced English child, and then a fairy-like figure in blue tulle dress looking wistfully beneath a wondrous hat. There could be no mistake. This was Miss Lyne.

"But tell me, please, what is your real name?"

"My real name? Felice, of course; what should it be? I was named for my mother's bridesmaid, but it is quite true that I am happy by nature."

"It must not be difficult to be happy when the whole world is smiling, when it is June in London and you are London's dainty favorite, talked about and admired and praised out of all proportion to your size."

"Size?"

"Well, you are not very weighty. I weigh just 92 pounds (the English say 8 stone odd, don't they?) with my hat. Speaking of size, I am having such fun over the tomb."

"You see we used the Nielsen-Terry properties in our 'Romeo and Juliet,' and you know Phyllis Nielsen-Terry is 6 foot 2. Of course, the tomb was made for her and when I got into it I simply have to stick up one little toe to show people I have not dropped out of the performance altogether."

"Do you like London hostesses?"

"I love them. I love the English. They have been so gentle, so real to me, that I have nothing in my heart but a great admiration. English women are beautiful and as for the children—I was singing their serene high-highnesses, the Prince and Princess Alexander of Teck. Their children, beautiful, eager creatures, kept their eyes on mine until I had done, then they turned up to tell me how they liked it. It was delightful singing in that house and it was through her brother, Prince Alexander of Teck, that I was presented to the queen."

"The queen is a hard woman?"

"Hard, no—keenly intelligent, direct and strong. She looked straight at me through and through and then she smiled when she got behind the make-up—she asked me all about my life, what I was doing. Not idle questions, but simply leading demands for the truth which it would have been impossible to evade. Her majesty was listening to an account of a party at Prince Alexander's. She asked me what I had done, and if I had made an impression. When the little tale was finished she said quite unexpectedly, 'Now tell me all about it again.'"

"I love to sing in private houses, the beautiful rooms, the cool scented air, the women's shoulders rippling in front of me—it is all truly inspiring."

"Didn't you sing for the Whitehall Reids the other day?"

"Yes, I was asked by Ambassador and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid to sing at their great farewell party given to the German ambassador. I sang and sang, and then I enjoyed myself perfectly. I met every ambassador in London and had a beautiful evening. Mrs. Reid said it was all a great success, and she introduced me to some people who have become real friends. Lady Sackville waited for almost an hour in that chair (the same chair where I had sat for an hour and a half with my eyes glued on the lift) when she came to ask me to sing for her. I laughingly touched wood when speaking of some stroke of luck. Next day Lady Sackville sent me a little wood luck token framed in jewels. I shall always keep it near me."

"In addition to the box holders, thousands of people have filled the grand stands, proving the lure of popular entertainment to those who have never seen the game before, but who are rapidly becoming enthusiastic."

Midweek of Pasadena, with its Eastern stars; Cooperstown with its all-conquering polo men; San Mateo's players, who must both play polo and act as hosts, the three hard-hitting army teams have all been seen in play and have won their ardent followers.

This tournament will last until May 1, and there are many cups to be competed for during the coming weeks. Among the recent visitors were Mr. and Mrs. William Hitt of Washington, D. C., the latter of whom was formerly Miss Katherine Ellings.

Dai-Ching Nuptials.

Miss Annie Chung, a popular and pretty Chinese girl born in Honolulu, was united in marriage on March 27, 1915, to Dr. Dai Yen Chang, at the home of the mother of the bridegroom, by Rev. Akaiho Akana. The ceremony took place amidst a bower of palms, ferns, flowers and flags of all nations, and the home was otherwise beautifully decorated. The bride was handsomely gowned in Occidental fashion and was attended by Miss Eleanor Chung, a sister, and Miss Elsie Hou as bridesmaids. Kim Tong Ho acted as groomsmen. The ceremony was well attended by relatives of the bride and groom, friends and many of the Chinese merchants.

Mrs. Dai Yen Chang (nee Annie Chung) is a prominent member of the Chinese Congregational church. She was educated in the public schools and graduated from the Normal school and the Kawaihau seminary, afterwards taking up the profession of school teacher for some time.

Dr. Dai Yen Chang is also a Hawaiian-born Chinese. He is a self-made man. He took up dentistry as a profession, and after his studies in Honolulu went to the mainland, where he entered Northwestern university.

FT. SHAFTER SOCIETY.

(Special service in connection with the Shafter Society.)
The deep sympathy and interest shown by the submarine disaster caused a general suspension of all social life throughout the city, with the exception of the few who remained to carry on the work. The Shafter Society was organized to carry on the work of the Shafter Society. The Shafter Society was organized to carry on the work of the Shafter Society. Capt. and Mrs. George H. Jamerson of the 2d Infantry are expected to return from the mainland by the transport sailing from San Francisco on the 5th of this month. Mrs. Jamerson has been absent since December on an extended visit with her mother in Detroit, and while East went on to Washington for a rather lengthy stay, where she was extensively entertained. Capt. Jamerson's trip did not extend further than San Francisco, where he was joined by Mrs. Jamerson and Master Osmond Jamerson for a visit at the exposition.

Both the dancing class and the "Ladies' night" at the regimental mess were but slimly attended this past week, while the fortnightly hop that would have occurred on Friday by regular schedule was wholly done away with in deference to the week being a solemn one in the church. It is expected that the hop will take place next Friday evening and thereafter every fortnight.

Maj. Smith is expecting to receive his orders announcing his promotion and a possible change of station from Fort Shafter. In the event that a change does not follow with the new grade Mrs. Smith plans to go to California next month and will spend the summer there in company with her daughter during the latter's vacation from Attleboro school at Palo Alto.

Mrs. Paul R. Malone asked in a few of her friends for tea on Monday to meet Mrs. Van Slyke, who was the house guest of Mrs. Francis H. French for a few days. The affair was most informal and yet none the less enjoyable. Mrs. Malone's tea table was drawn up on the lawn and the result was a delightful hour.

Capt. and Mrs. A. P. Clark, who came to Fort Shafter last week from Schofield Barracks, have taken the set of quarters vacated by Capt. and Mrs. R. M. Culler on the main road in the cantonment. Capt. and Mrs. Culler will leave for the states by the transport that is due in Honolulu from Manila on Monday.

The Misses Jones and Carpenter from Schofield Barracks were house guests of the Misses Leinhan over Sunday of last week and were members with Misses Halleran and Barlowe of the tramp and picnic up Tantalus that was organized by the Misses Leinhan for last Sunday.

Mrs. James E. Bell will entertain the young friends of her son at a picnic today to mark the vacation of these young people from their respective schools.

The Russian government prohibited the export, without a special permit, of any article of forage or food.
